

Leadership for turbulent times

Issued by Red & Yellow

29 Aug 2017

It's tough out there. Leaders are facing an unpredictable economy, aggressive competitors and complex work dynamics. This reality requires creative solutions and high-performing teams for businesses to succeed.

And high-performing teams are driven by leaders who know how to empower, inspire and influence outcomes. This is no easy feat. Most leaders are unaware of how they personally affect their team's performance or how their team's productivity depends on the way leaders act, respond and speak. How aware are you?

Simon Hurry of the Human Strategy Group says, "Leadership is directed action. It is not a function defined by a title nor is it something that requires permission. A leader possesses two things; clarity and consistency."

Creating High Performance Teams Exec Ed Workshop

Clarity is knowing where you are going and why you are going there. Consistency is about maintaining your shape; being who you say you are. Authentic and stable.

Both of these factors generate hope and trust in people. And in turn empowers people to be more and give more."

So if you're a leader, no matter how small the team, or preparing to lead in future, you should grab one of the last few tickets to Red & Yellow's Exec Ed Workshop on Creating High Performance Teams.
