

July issue of PCFormat offers 3D supplement on E3

The recent E3 (Electronic Entertainment Expo) will be covered in a 3D 32-page special supplement in the July issue of PCFormat, out now.

It will provide readers with comprehensive insights into what took place in Los Angeles 11-13 June 2013.

PCFormat editor, Garth Holden, says, "in addition to the visuals, this year's 3D supplement has a much higher word count because we wanted to give readers as much information as possible about the games and hardware that we had hands-on time with. With so many high quality titles at the event, we were hard-pressed to choose 31 games we felt were really worth getting excited about. There is full coverage of the conferences by Sony, Nintendo, Microsoft, EA and Ubisoft along with a personal tour of the show and the annual G3AR E3 awards. We got hands-on time with both the PlayStation 4 and the Xbox One, an experience we believe readers are interested in."

Panorama digital head, Dawid Venter, adds, "Attending E3 this year was overwhelming, with Sony and Microsoft detailing their new consoles and games. To help our readers experience E3 for themselves it includes an E3 video tour on the monthly PCFormat DVD. We've also covered many other E3 topics online via the PCFormat G3AR website, www.g3ar.co.za."
