

Bullock kisses Johansson as The Twilight Saga: New Moon dominates

The Twilight Saga: New Moon dominated the MTV Movie Awards earlier this week winning five Golden Popcorns, including Best Movie. The surprise of the night, though, may well have been the on-stage kiss given Scarlett Johansson by Sandra Bullock.

Screened live on MTV (DStv Channel 321), "MTV Movie Awards" was filled with laugh-out-loud film parodies as host Aziz Ansari inserted himself into scenes from "The Blind Side" and "Precious," before being introduced by heart-throb Justin Bieber. Ansari also brought down the house when he channeled R Kelly, performing a new "Avatar"-themed song in which he slammed British Petroleum, marking the latest installment of his ongoing parodies of the R&B star.

Hollywood mega-mogul and Movie Awards producer Les Grossman (aka Tom Cruise) commandeered the "2010 MTV Movie Awards" stage in an explosive, surprise dance number with a bedazzled Jennifer Lopez, as well as with recurring rants at a long list of Hollywood stars in his line of fire, including Robert Pattinson, Taylor Lautner, Will and Jaden Smith and Michael Cera.

Twelve categories

Led by die-hard Twilight fans, viewers this year banded together to vote for their favourite films across 12 categories. Twilight dominated the ceremony, taking home five Golden Popcorn statues, including top honours for Best Movie, presented by Tom Cruise and Cameron Diaz. Robert Pattinson won two statues for Best Male Performance and MTV's newest category Global Superstar, in recognition of his universal appeal. Kristen Stewart took the top spot for the second year in a row for Best Female Performance.

The Hangover grabbed two awards, with Zach Galifianakis winning Best Comedic Performance and Ken Jeong being honoured with Best WTF Moment. The Badass award of the night went to Rain for his performance in Ninja Assassin, and Amanda Seyfried won a Golden Popcorn for Best Scared As ST Performance in Jennifer's Body. Best Breakout Star went to Anna Kendrick for her performance in Up In The Air. The Villain award went to Tom Felton for his role as Draco Malfoy in Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince. Beyoncé Knowles and Ali Larter won Best Fight for their on-screen slap-fest in Obsessed.

Bullock and Johansson

In the highly anticipated moment of the night, Academy Award-winning actress Sandra Bullock was presented with the esteemed MTV Generation Award for her dynamic career and for entertaining generations of MTV viewers. Betty White and Bradley Cooper presented, along with Scarlett Johansson, whose real-life husband Ryan Reynolds was nominated in the Best Kiss category with Bullock for The Proposal. In a reference to her steamy on-screen collision with Ryan, Sandra locked lips with Scarlett to make sure she didn't feel left out.

Prompting yet another Les Grossman outburst, The Hangover's Ed Helms, dressed as a cloud, sang his famous Stu's Song while a tiger-leotard-clad Ken Jeong performed a hilarious ballet solo. Grossman spoiled the recital by booting both of them off the stage.

A puff of smoke

The night also featured high-voltage musical performances from two of today's biggest superstar artists. In a picture postcard brought to life, Katy Perry surfed onto the Movie Awards stage to perform her latest single, California Gurls, joined by Snoop Dogg, who rolled out on his own personal oasis amidst a puff of smoke.

Christina Aguilera wowed fans with a futuristic, multimedia extravaganza while performing a medley of Bionic, Not Myself Tonight and Woohoo from her forthcoming album.

The MTV audience was also treated to exclusive first looks at two highly anticipated movie releases of 2010, including The Twilight Saga: Eclipse and Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows - Part 2.

Top names

The 2010 MTV Movie Awards welcomed the top names in Hollywood, music and TV throughout the night with a glittering line-up of presenters, which included Robert Pattinson, Kristen Stewart, Taylor Lautner, the cast of the forthcoming film Grown Ups (Adam Sandler, Kevin James, Chris Rock, David Spade and Rob Schneider), Paul Rudd, Jason Segel, Anna Kendrick, Christopher Mintz-Plasse, Aubrey Plaza, Tom Cruise, Cameron Diaz, Zac Efron, Jonah Hill, Jessica Biel, Bradley Cooper, Steve Carell, Miranda Cosgrove, Shaun White, Vanessa Hudgens, Sean "Diddy" Combs, Russell Brand, Will Ferrell, Mark Wahlberg, Scarlett Johansson, Betty White, Samuel L Jackson, Dwayne Johnson, TI, Jessica Alba, Michael Cera, Eva Mendes, Ed Helms and Kieran Culkin.
