

Emirates plans big staff increase for 2015

The Emirates Group, which comprises Emirates airline and dnata, is planning to hire more than 11,000 new staff in 2015 across its business, in line with its projected growth across six continents.

Image: www.freedigitalphotos.net

This would increase its staff size by 6% by March 2016. Approximately half of the new recruits will comprise Dubai-based cabin crew for Emirates airline. As the airline gears up to receive over 20 new aircraft this year, it is also actively recruiting talent in areas such as flight operations, engineering, airport services, and corporate functions.

dnata, which today provides aviation and travel services in 90 cities across 38 countries, is also seeking talent for its growing business, particularly airport operations, engineering and commercial business development.

Good career prospects

"Both Emirates and dnata are exciting and industry-leading companies. Skilled candidates know they can look forward to a truly international and multicultural working environment, as well as good career prospects with a stable and growing company. Our brand, our financial success and stability, and our growth, makes Emirates Group an attractive employer in the global arena for the best talent, and that's why each month we receive thousands of applications from candidates across the world looking to join our dynamic team," said Abdulaziz Al Ali, Executive Vice-President Human Resources, Emirates Airline and Group.

"Right now we have over 75,000 employees in Dubai and around the world. More than 12,000 of our employees have been with the group for over 10 years, and almost 3000 have worked with us for over 20 years. More than anything, these facts illustrate the type of employer we are and the opportunities that we can offer."