

CSIR ICC assist students in hospitality industry

The CSIR International Convention Centre (CSIR ICC) recently appointed four students to do their in-service training they need to obtain their various qualifications in the hospitality industry.

The CSIR International Convention Centre in-service trainee programmes are aimed at addressing skills shortage and are tailored to enhance the students' knowledge and offer them the necessary skills for employment in the hospitality industry.

The students, Francinah Ndala, Noluthando Shabangu, Peter Mabela and Deogracious Chauke will be working in various departments of the CSIR ICC for the next few months each and gaining knowledge in their respective fields.

Capacity development has continuously been a priority for the CSIR ICC and the ICC has accommodated many in-service trainees over the years.

"We wish our trainees well during their stay with us and believe it will be a mutually beneficial relationship", says Bronwen Cadle de Ponte, CSIR ICC General Manager.
