Just how much are your creative ideas worth? From chief financial officers to kitchen-bench creative entrepreneurs, few are immune to the complexities of this question from a financial and budgetary perspective. But help is at hand. Australian-based international finance guru to the creatives, Kathryn Williams, plans on answering this question and more at the 2022 Nedbank IMC.

Kathryn Williams

Known internationally as the 'go-to financial and business guru, and finance director gun for hire', Kathryn has been working in marketing and communications for more than 30 years. Through consulting, mentoring, workshops, books and keynotes, she seeks to inspire creative decision makers, teams and individuals to think and act differently when approaching financial management of creative output.

On 29 July at the 2022 Nedbank IMC, Kathryn's entertaining and innovative approach to finance in creative industries will offer a mix of insight, advice and practical tools in a topic entitled, 'How much are your ideas really worth? The relevance of return of investment, revenue and your internet protocol'.

'While marketers and creatives rely on a combination of their persuasive powers and internal metrics to show the benefit of planned campaigns,' explains Kathryn, 'there are challenges when having to place a reliable financial value to the creative work.'

With a conference theme of 'Relevance. Unpacked and interrogated', Kathryn's contribution to the 2022 Nedbank IMC is on the money. Nedbank IMC chief executive officer, Dale Hefer, says Kathryn has a depth of expertise in an area that is often not interrogated deeply enough. 'At this year's conference we'll be getting down to the nuts and bolts of our discipline, and Kathryn is one of those sterling speakers that will show us how.'

As a taster of what's in store, the Nedbank IMC, in partnership with Kathryn's consulting firm, KMint, will offer a discount coupon (IMC2022KMintIgnition) to the first webinar of her 2022 webinar series. On Friday, 25 February 2022, the webinar will cover asset creation and revenue generation, and will explore topics such as buyer psychology and outcomes-based compensation models.
