- A must-listen for marketers, brands and agencies who want the low-down on some of the most memorable marketing moments we all wish we had made

Digital and marketing strategist Mongezi Mtati has launched the second season of his podcast, The Lead Creative.

The Lead Creative series offers everyone interested in advertising, marketing and branding a weekly conversation with great minds behind some of the most high-profile leading brands, businesses and organisations we all love. Expect fun-filled chats with advertising thought leaders, forward-thinking brand leaders, innovative digital marketers and content creators. Mtati takes his listeners behind the scenes and into the thinking and processes that created some of the most memorable marketing moments we all wish we had made.

"Some of the world's best creative ideas have changed brands, sold products and helped to build society," says Mtati. "In The Lead Creative podcast, I talk to strategists, leading marketers and some of the most preeminent minds across industries to understand better why and how creative ideas can start movements, build brands, change minds and shift the status quo."

Initially started in the height of Covid lockdown, Mtati was writing, interviewing, producing, and publishing The Lead Creative, in collaboration with iAfrikan, from his couch. Now, with the support of award-winning digital marketing agency Rogerswilco – where Mtati is a brand strategist – season two shares analysis, trends and strategic intelligence with South African, African, and global mavens who will inspire all who listen.
