Senior strategist, Thobeka Sibiya joined THB in January 2019. Hailing from FCB Africa as a strategic planner based in Johannesburg, Thobeka relocated to the sunny shores of Durban to be a part of The Hardy Boys' creative agency, revealing it was the forward-thinking agency culture and talented people that attracted her to this role.

Thobeka reveals, "Transformation is extremely important to me, more than representation, it's about creating a space where people's voices are heard and respected. Hence, I have made a conscious decision to choose an agency where this sits at the heart of the business."

Thobeka's experience in FMCG and QSR (Quick Service Restaurants) have given her invaluable insights into consumer behavior and South African buying habits. Her biggest career highlight so far was working on a launch campaign for SA Tourism called, "We Do Tourism", which set out to make tourism accessible to all South Africans, no matter their circumstances. "Doing work that matters has become vital in our industry, now more than ever."

Says managing director, Sue Napier, "We searched the country, quite literally, to find who we believe to be one of the best, young strategic minds in South Africa to join our team. I could not be more proud that Thobeka chose to join The Hardy Boys team. She brings with her not only a depth and breadth of strategic capability but an innate sense of curiosity, intelligence and work ethic that will prove invaluable to both the agency and to our clients."
