Nike was once again awarded as the Uber Cool Overall Brand, followed by Samsung and Adidas in 2nd and 3rd place respectively. Nike was also awarded as the Coolest Shoe/Footwear Brand, and the one with the Coolest Brand Slogan, Just Do It!

Leading barometer of what youth find on-trend

Now in its 14th year, the Sunday Times Generation Next Youth survey, in association with leading youth market specialists, HDI Youth Marketeers polls more than twelve thousand youths from around the country, across more than seventy categories, and is considered the leading barometer of what SA's kids, teens and young adults find on-trend and aspirational.

Reardon Sanderson, GM group sales and marketing at Tiso Blackstar says: "The Sunday Times Generation Next survey is a great insight into how the youth perceive and attribute value to brands in a highly competitive market. It's always important for brands to understand how a very switched-on youth segment makes decisions, as they'll soon be the income-earners of tomorrow."

“Geeez... Youth influence spend of over R120 billion annually! Kids are expensive #GenNext2018 @ST_GenNext @HDIYouth— Katlego Modipane (@TKModipane) June 14, 2018”

He added: "The results can have a strong impact on the tactics and longer-term marketing strategies that brands put in place, and the Sunday Times recognises the very important role this survey plays for advertisers."

Bongani Chinkanda, CEO of HDI Youth Marketeers, says the internet and social media are having increasing impact on SA's youth, and the choices they make as consumers.

“In the past 60 seconds, 500 hours of video content have been uploaded on Youtube, 3.3 million Facebook posts have gone up, 29 million Whatsapp messages have been exchanged, and a total of 3.8 million Google searches made.

This shows how digital has taken over in the past 14 years. With Google and Facebook the biggest digital media platforms in the world, it shows the importance of brands going digital and being intentional when reaching youth ”
