

Weylandts introduces first Timothy Oulton Gallery in Africa

The first Timothy Oulton gallery in Africa has been launched by Weylandts inside its Fourways store. The dedicated 85 sqm space is exclusively branded and furnished with Timothy Oulton pieces and is the first store-within-a-store concept Weylandts has introduced.

A British furniture company, Timothy Oulton is renowned for its luxury and dramatic collections, including handcrafted leather furniture, unique lighting pieces and home accessories.

"This is an exciting addition to our offering. I have been a fan of the range for many years and am delighted to enhance its presence within our stores with a dedicated showroom in Fourways. The synergy between the two brands has been instrumental in making this decision," said Chris Weylandt.

"We share the same ideals of furniture being of the highest quality, bold and timeless and an unrelenting drive to deliver a world-class customer experience in-store. I think the Johannesburg market is ready for something different, this is definitely it."

The opening of the Johannesburg gallery marks the next step in Timothy Oulton's expansion. From New York to New Delhi and Harrods in London, Timothy Oulton now has 40 galleries across the globe.
