

Judy Dlamini, Thomas Kgokolo acknowledged at Leadership in Practice Awards

Dr Judy Dlamini and Thomas Kgokolo were recognised at the annual Leadership in Practice (LIP) Awards, which was hosted by Unisa's Graduate School of Business Leadership (SBL) on 15 November 2018.

Source: supplied

Dlamini - who is a medical doctor, business leader, and author - received the Leadership in Practice Award and the Woman in Leadership Award. Kgokolo, who is the interim CEO of the Air Traffic and Navigation Services, received the Emerging Leader Award.

The awards received by Dlamini and Kgokolo seek to honour individuals that have demonstrated outstanding leadership qualities in multiple spheres of society. The recipients are selected by SBL's alumni and a panel of SBL experts who consider the nominee's business or political achievements, as well as the value that these achievements have added to society. Each year the LIP Award recipient's essence is encapsulated into a theme that overarches the awards ceremony and dinner event. For Dlamini, the theme was 'Bravely Illuminating'.

UCT GSB partners with WEF to bring YGL to the Mother City

UCT Graduate School of Business 20 Nov 2018

The criteria for the LIP Awards is vision, values, influence, results, and contribution to the community. This year the SBL included two new categories within the leadership awards with the purpose of specifically recognising both women and emerging leaders in our society.