

Progression's Disability Conference unpacks reasonable accommodation

Issued by Progression

3 May 2016

Progression brings its 5th Annual Disability Conference to Cape Town on 9 June 2016. Explore tools, technologies and systems for reasonably accommodating people with disabilities in the workplace.

The programme, which will run over one day, aims to unpack what reasonable accommodation is, its background in relation to legislation and disability in the workplace, what technology is available to provide solutions to reasonable accommodation and will explore the accessibility of our physical environments.

Speakers at this year's Disability Conference will include Julia Wood, Organisational Development Manager at Progression; Keshika Naidoo, registered Occupational Therapist; Hiten Bawa, Architect and Universal Design Consultant; Danny Havenga, director of Microlink PC South Africa and Justene Smith, Disability Specialist. Each speaker will share their own expertise as they guide delegates through the social context of reasonable accommodation, technology, software adaptations and exploring the limitations and abilities of the individuals involved.
