The official nominees for the National Film & TV Awards South Africa (NFTA) have been released by the National Film Academy.

Image supplied. The official nominees for the National Film & TV Awards South Africa (NFTA) has been released by the National Film Academy.

This follows the announcement today, by the Academy, of the launch of the annual National Film & TV Awards here in South Africa.

The South African annual version of the NFTA is set to take place at the Opera Theatre, in Pretoria on the 21st of October 2023.

Public Voting commences on today to 10 October 2023 via title sponsor, new social media network Telephonos.com.

The National Film & TV Awards South Africa will be broadcast to 15 countries, showcasing the depth and breadth of South African movies and talent to a global audience.

To elevate talent to the global stage

The National Film Academy with a history of 25 years, is one of the world's largest film and TV academies, boasting over 7.5 million members globally and is the driving force behind awards such as the National Film Awards UK, National Film & TV Awards USA, and National Reality Television Awards.

“Every territory we expand in, our goal remains constant: to elevate talent both on/off camera, films and television shows to the global stage,” says Sara Kensington, head of partnerships at the National Film Academy

“ The worldwide rise of African music, from Afrobeats to Amapiano, is evidence of the potential African talent possess. Starting from South Africa, the National Film Academy is looking forward to providing a global platform for talent and films to succeed worldwide,” she adds.

Previous South African notable accolades from the Academy's international awards include Trevor Noah's win for Best Talk Show at the National Film & TV Awards USA in 2018 and South African actress Terry Pheto's win for Best Supporting Actress at the National Film Awards UK in 2017 for her role in A United Kingdom.

In 2023, the South African edition of the hit reality TV show, Love & HipHop SA, clinched the title for Best International TV Show at the National Reality TV Awards in London.
