

Educational video stories for youngsters

Reading Matters, distributor and supplier of educational books and resources in South Africa, has added a collection of YouTube video stories for young learners to its website.

The website is filled with educational resources for parents, learners and educators alike, and the YouTube video stories, featured on the website are an excellent tool for learners and teachers during the Covid-19 lockdown months.

All the stories are proudly South African, and exude the colour and uniqueness entwined through our society. Feedback received thus far has been very positive, and parents and educators are encouraged to send the story links to children and students.
