

World Media Awards open for entries

Entries for World Media Awards (hosted by the World Media Group) have opened. The global World Media Awards (WMAs) are the only awards that celebrate the effectiveness of cross platform, cross border, content-driven advertising and the organisers are particularly keen to receive more entries from the Middle East and Africa this year.

Entry to the WMAs at www.wm-awards.com is totally free, but entrants have the option to make a voluntary donation to Reporters Without Borders. Campaigns must be content-driven and have intentionally targeted audiences in at least four countries, with 75% of activity having been implemented in 2016.

All categories can be entered by advertisers and their media, PR and creative agencies; while media owners are only permitted to enter the new Entertainment and Media category directly. There is no requirement for campaigns to have run in any of the World Media Group brands. The closing date for entries is Thursday, 16 February 2017.

To reflect the importance of collaboration in creating successful international, content-driven advertising campaigns, the independent jury will number 30 heavy-weight judges from brands, agencies and media owners and is presided over by three co-heads: Ian Armstrong, global advertising general manager, Jaguar Land Rover; Sanjay Nazeralli, Global Chief Strategy officer with Carat Global; and Raquel Bubar, director, T Brand Studio International at The New York Times. The full list of judges is available on the website.

Categories

There will be eight Award categories and a Grand Prix selected by the jury from amongst the category winners, as follows:

- Automotive
- Corporate Influencer
- Financial Services
- Foreign Direct Investment and Economic Development
- Lifestyle & Luxury
- Media & Entertainment (new)
