Ogilvy South Africa celebrated a triumphant night at this year's Assegai Awards, hosted by the Direct Marketing Association of South Africa, to celebrate the most effective marketing in 2019.

Ogilvy walked away with a staggering total of 52 awards on the evening, including 18 golds and the ultimate prize of Agency of The Year.

The agency has enjoyed a remarkable winning streak this year for both creativity and effectiveness, proving that highly creative work, with strong consumer insights, will deliver high performance results for its clients. The win follows last year's success, where Ogilvy were also the most awarded agency at the Assegais.

This year's accolade builds further on Ogilvy's credentials to deliver highly effective advertising; after its Grand Prix win at the 2019 Apex awards, and 2 gold awards for Creative Effectiveness at the 2019 Loerie Awards.

Ogilvy South Africa Chief Creative Officer, Pete Case comments, "We're very proud of these results, and the amazing teams behind the work. This achievement echoes the talent and innovation that exists at Ogilvy, and there's no better time for an agency to prove its ability to deliver results for brands. It underscores our mission as a Modern Marketing agency which creates 'work that works'."

On the night, Ogilvy won 18 Golds, 7 silvers, 13 bronze, 12 leaders and 2 specialist awards - emerging as both overall Agency of The Year – and the Best Performing Agency of The Year.

Work won across multiple categories including; integrated marketing, online campaigns, and social media, was for the following clients: Cadbury, Vodacom, Castle, Carling Black Label, KFC, Multichoice, Audi, Schweppes, Energade, Clorets, the Rape Crisis Trust and National Sea Rescue.

Ogilvy South Africa Chief Strategy Officer, Neo Makhele adds “Our ability to combine human insights with technology, data and digital media to create impactful storytelling, continues to deliver value not only for us, but most importantly our clients.”
